

Warning devices alert pedestrian to approaching trains, and signs instruct people to look both ways before crossing tracks.

Security cameras and emergency phones are located on station platforms.

Metro Transit police officers ride buses and trains as well as patrol along transit routes.

